PREFACE

The knowledge of good work should be preserved and extended. In our day this is done, not by tradition, but by the printed page. In the early building of Colorado, none wrought more wisely or faithfully than members of the medical profession; no interests were more essential than those they served—the conservation of life and health. Many are still living who knew these pioneers, and we are fortunate in possessing institutions and means for preserving a knowledge of them.

The most appropriate memorial to these medical pioneers, one that will retain the brief outline of who they were and how they shared in the early professional life of the state, as well as the influence of their service, their example, and their high ideals upon those who succeeded them throughout the formative stages of the development of the state, appears to be a list of the published contributions to the literature of medicine by the profession in Colorado.

The value and desirability of such a record, which should at the same time commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of The Colorado State Medical Society, were suggested by Dr. C. D. Spivak in 1918, who later gave his suggestion concrete form by personal compilation of a very considerable mass of Colorado medical bibliography. The proposal was finally adopted by the Society in 1921, and a committee was appointed to compile the list of titles of the published works of the medical profession in Colorado during the fifty years since the organization of the Society, and issue it as a semi-centennial Jubilee Volume, the cost to be covered by an appropriation from the treasury and voluntary subscriptions to a guarantee fund.

The bibliography herein presented is confined to the titles of articles published by physicians during their residence in the state, to December, 1921, and (in a separate list) by the official guests of the Society. This material has been gathered from the records of the Society, from the medical journals published in this state, and from the principal medical publications of the United States (a list of which appears on another page). The names of writers are arranged alphabetically, and the titles of publications are given under the respective authors in chronological order, except that books are first mentioned.

The list of titles is preceded by a few "Historical Notes," including a brief account of each of the meetings of the Society, which were held annually, without exception, from 1871 to 1921.

HISTORICAL NOTES

Pioneer physicians

Before reviewing the history of the Colorado State Medical Society it appears entirely appropriate to direct attention to a few of the medical men whose activities were a part of the early history of Colorado, and to consider the meed of praise and respect due these medical pioneers, whose work of exploration and of uplift in the development of the Territory was carried on amid hardships and dangers, in a new and unsettled land occupied only by roving, untamed bands of Indians, and whose efforts for scientific advancement and medical organization antedated the formal inauguration of the Colorado Territorial Medical Society.

Exploring Expeditions

We find that Dr. John H. Robinson, as a volunteer surgeon, accompanied Lieut. Zebulon M. Pike on his explorations through Colorado in the expedition of 1805-1806-1807. Dr. Robinson appears to have been particularly active and useful, and when he left the party on February 7th, 1807, while it was occupying its last camp on the Conejos river, Lieut. Pike wrote of him: "As a gentleman and companion in dangers, difficulties, and hardships, I in particular, and the expedition generally, owe much to his exertions." *

Dr. Edwin James (see frontispiece), a graduate physician, was attached to the government exploring expedition of Major Stephen H. Long in the years 1819-1820, as botanist, geologist and surgeon. He later became its historian, writing up the notes of Major Long and other gentlemen of the party,  and subsequently practised medicine in the state of Iowa. Dr. Baldwin and Dr. Thomas are also mentioned in the official report as members of the expedition. Dr. James distinguished himself in his professional capacity† and as being the first white man to ascend Pikes Peak, which Major Long at once named for him. Later when Pike was honored by his name being given to the mountain, the name James was transferred to the mountain in Gilpin County, near Central City, that has since been known as James Peak.

Col. Henry Dodge, in his report to Congress of his military exploring expedition of 1835, ‡ in the course of which he visited Colorado, mentions Dr. Fellows, Assistant Surgeon, as being a member of his party. It is believed that this was Dr. Benj. F. Fellowes who was later stationed at St. Louis. In 1839, Dr. F. A. Wislizenus, of St. Louis, made a journey to the Rocky Mountains and visited Colorado. He wrote an account of his travels which has been published. § Army surgeons were attached to the exploring parties of Lieut. John C. Fremont of 1842-1845, and of Col. Stephen W. Kearney of 1845, both of which passed through Colorado, and others were stationed at the various military outposts as they were established in Colorado. Dr. Hempstead, Post Surgeon in 1846 of Fort Bent, on the Arkansas (between the present towns of La Junta and Las Animas), was a well recognized medical practitioner, and was one of the very earliest, if not the first, to be identified with Colorado.* Dr. DeWitt C. Peters, Late Assistant Surgeon, U. S. A., was personally authorized to write the life of the famous scout, Kit Carson.† Dr. H. R. Tilton, Surgeon, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Lyon, Colorado, attended Kit Carson during his last illness (1867), and entertained him by reading passages from Dr. Peters' book.‡ Dr. W. A. Bell, of London, who afterward resided at Manitou, Colorado, accompanied a railroad surveying party, under the command of Gen. Wm. J. Palmer, which passed through southeastern Colorado in 1867 en route to the Pacific coast, and on his return published a most interesting and valuable journal of his travels and adventures.§ Among the great number of travellers and roving pioneers who visited Colorado during the many years preceding the rush of immigration due to reports of the discovery of gold in the territory, there were doubtless many physicians of whom little or nothing has been recorded. Many capable physicians and surgeons were attached to the several exploring and surveying parties sent out by the Government, including that of Newberry in 1859, that of Hayden in 1873-1875, and that of Wheeler in 1876; but they were not definitely identified with the medical personnel of Colorado.

Settlement of Denver

The organization of the Colorado Territorial Medical Society was more intimately connected with the early history of Denver than with that of any other part of the Territory, since the early settlers in Colorado, coming because of the reports of gold, first located mining and supply camps near, or on, the present site of Denver, and accessible to the mountains. These settlements steadily led all others in population and were finally consolidated and became the capital of the territory and state. The first attempted settlement was established about the middle of September, 1858, on the eastern bank of the South Platte river, about six miles above the mouth of Cherry Creek, and this group of fifteen or twenty cabins was called Montana City. Another group of immigrants located a town site one mile square on the east side of Cherry Creek, near its junction with the South Platte river, in Arapahoe County, Kansas Territory (the present site of the business section of Denver), and on September 24th, 1858, organized the St. Charles Town Association. Still another group located on the west bank of Cherry Creek, across from the St. Charles site, and on October 30th, 1858, organized the Auraria Town Company. Dr. Levi J. Russell figured prominently in this group, and the name selected was that of his home in Georgia. Three weeks later Auraria had a formidable rival in the Denver City Town Company, organized November 22nd, 1858, and named after General James W. Denver, then the Territorial Governor of Kansas, certain "enterprising" citizens from eastern Kansas having "jumped" the site of St. Charles City. In the spring of 1859 the site of Montana City was abandoned and its people moved to the town sites at the mouth of Cherry Creek.

Auraria and Denver

On August 6, 1859, the Rocky Mountain News changed its headline to Auraria, K. T.; on August 20, to Auraria and Denver, K. T.; on November 10, to Auraria and Denver, Jefferson; on April 11, 1860, to Denver, Jefferson; and on March 13, 1861, to Denver, Colorado Territory. In explanation of these more important headline changes of location, it may be noted that a local convention, in October, 1859, had determined to take Arapahoe County from Kansas and form "Jefferson Territory," with Robert W. Steele as its Governor. Auraria and Denver united their fortunes under the title of Denver in March, 1860, and, the Territory of Jefferson never having received official recognition, President Buchanan, by authority of Congress, on February 28th, 1861, signed the decree by which the western part of Kansas became the Territory of Colorado.

Immigrant arrivals

The influx of "Emigrant Arrivals," as the weekly Rocky Mountain News of 1859 and 1860 styled them, included a goodly number of medical men who settled in Denver or in the mountain mining camps. The following were among these early settlers: Drs. G. N. Woodward, Samuel Reed, J. W. Lee, Willing, J. W. Smith, Drake McDowell, W. F. McClelland, A. Steinberger, McClain, G. W. Bark, W. H. Farner, A. F. Peck of Cache á la Poudre (who came to Denver after about six months), E. Fitzpatrick of Arapahoe City (near Golden), C. R. Bissell, A. M. Smith, J. Casto, J. S. Stone (who died as the result of a duel) of Mountain City (later Central City), and J. W. McCade of Nevada Gulch.

Several of these physicians joined in an effort to establish a medical society, and the Rocky Mountain News of June 6, 1860, contains the following item of news:

Organization of the Jefferson Medical Society

The first medical society

"At a meeting of the regular members of the Medical profession of Jefferson Territory, on Saturday, June 2nd, Dr. W. M. Belt was called to the Chair, and Dr. Drake McDowell appointed Secretary. When the following preamble and resolutions were passed:

Preamble: Whereas, For the advancement of our profession, and our common advantage, and the cultivation of harmony and good feeling, a complete understanding is necessary between the members of the profession relating to fees, ethics, etc., it is Resolved, 1st, That we immediately proceed to the organization of a Territorial Medical and Surgical Association, which shall be known as the Jefferson Medical Society. And that our brethren throughout the Territory are cordially invited to cooperate with us.

Resolved, 2nd, That two committees, consisting of two each, be appointed by the chair. The duty of one to be, the preparation of a constitution and by-laws, of the other the preparation of a code of medical ethics, and the arrangement of a Medical and Surgical tariff.

Resolved, 4th, That a meeting of all regular members be called on Monday evening next, June 4th, at which meeting the committees report, and permanent officers are to be elected.

The Chair appointed on constitution and by-laws, Dr. J. J. Saville and Dr. Sylvester Rankin; on medical ethics and fees, Dr. S. E. Kennedy and Dr. Drake McDowell.

Drake McDowell, Sec. W. M. Belt, Pres't.
June 4th, 1860

"The Society met pursuant to adjournment, and was temporarily organized by placing Dr. McDowell in the Chair.

The Constitution and by-laws were received and adopted.

The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year:

President, W. M. Belt; Vice President, Drake McDowell; Treasurer, J. J. Saville; Secretary, S. E. Kennedy; Curators, the officers with Dr's. J. F. Hamilton, A. Cass and S. Rankin.

"Dr. Kennedy from the committee on ethics and fees, advised the adoption of the National Code of Medical Ethics, and the following bill of rates, which with amendments is as follows:----------*

"Every member of the faculty is expected to close the account due him immediately on the recovery of the patient, either by having the money paid or taking a note drawing interest at the rate of at least ten per cent per month. And unless the patient is a bona-fide resident the fees should be paid when the visit or service is made.

"After the discussion of various subjects the society requested the News and Herald to publish the proceedings, and adjourned to meet Monday, June 11th.

W. M. Belt, Pres't.

Physicians advertising cards

It is entirely probable that this first meeting, "in a rough log cabin," as described by Dr. Bancroft in a presidential address some years later, was held in the office of Dr. Belt, at the corner of Larimer and Sixteenth Streets, as indicated in his professional card in the same issue of the "News," "Wm. M. Belt, M. D., Office, Opposite the Brodwell House." The cards of other medical men appear in the newspapers of that day, as of "Dr. O. D. Cass, Physician and Surgeon." Such newspaper cards were not considered unethical, as for instance that of Dr. McClelland is published, and all who remember him well know that no one was more dignified and professionally correct. In the "News" of June 27, 1860, is an advertising card to the effect that the second quarterly meeting of the Medical Society will be held July 2nd, "and it is proper that the regular profession from all parts of the Territory will be present and take part in the proceedings."

The first hospital

It would appear from the records of the proceedings of the directors of the Denver City Town Company that Dr. Drake McDowell proposed that a city hospital should be organized, and although allusions are found in the minutes of the autumn of 1859 and the early part of 1860, it is uncertain what steps were taken to put the suggestion into effect, or what, if any, relation Dr. McDowell had with the hospital when established. The "News" of June 20th and 27th, 1860, contains an advertising card of the "City Hospital, Dr. J. F. Hamilton, Surgeon, Dr. O. D. Cass, Physician," and states that it is being conducted by Mr. Bennett as warden, with competent nurses. This hospital was located on Sixteenth Street below Blake. Dr. Hamilton was the first "City Physician" of Denver, having been appointed in the autumn of 1860, to serve without pay. No further mention of the hospital is found in the newspapers. It is believed it was continued little more than a year, although it was still in existence in the autumn of 1861 when Dr. Hamilton received the appointment of Surgeon of the First Regiment of Volunteer Infantry of Colorado. This regiment later won renown in New Mexico during the Civil War.

A medical society and an accident

Nothing is known of any further effort toward establishing a medical society until 1864. In a personal narrative to the writer, Dr. E. C. Gehrung, who came to Colorado in that year, states that on the 24th of September, 1864, about noon, Drs. R. G. Buckingham, W. F. McClelland, E. C. Strode, Feld, and Gant, met at his office on F St. (now Fifteenth), between Larimer and Holladay, organized the Denver Medical Society, and agreed on a fee-bill. His guests had barely left for their homes when, about one o'clock, a violent explosion of gunpowder occurred in an adjoining gunsmith shop, the result of an accidental discharge of a shot-gun which killed an employee. Dr. Gehrung was sitting in his office when the frame building in which it was located was completely destroyed by the explosion of gunpowder and he was buried in the ruins. Anatomical specimens in alcohol and glass jars were scattered about, and the alcohol, with which he was liberally covered, caught fire. He extricated himself from the debris with difficulty, and as he escaped into the street he was greeted by onlookers, who did not understand, with the remark, "see that fool running through the fire." Badly burned about the face and hands, he ran to Cheesman's drug store, on the corner of F and Blake Streets, where he was given first aid while doctors were being summoned. Several meetings of the society were held, but no records of them are known to have been preserved.

How many physicians were in Denver about this time is uncertain, but the Directory of 1866 gives the names of fourteen.

The effect of the Civil War

Dr. F. J. Bancroft, who came to Denver in 1865,* and probably knew much of these early day incidents from personal contact with the medical men of the day, but who did not know of, or overlooked, the formation of the medical society of 1864, refers to the medical societies in Colorado in his presidential address before the Eleventh Annual Convention of the Colorado State Medical Society, at Leadville, September, 1881, and says in part: "It was in Denver, in a rough log cabin, at the corner of Sixteenth and Larimer streets, that the first Colorado Medical Society saw the light. Its rise and fall were alike speedy. The civil strife into which our country was plunged in 1861 drew to itself most of its founders, among whom were Drs. O. D. Cass, Drake McDowell, J. F. Hamilton, Peck, Beale and Saville.

"These were led, according to their convictions, into the Union army, or south to the Confederate service, and the embryo Society, left to itself, perished from inanition.

"Thus was Colorado bereft of its first-born, and no other society was established until 1868, which, owing to internal dissensions, was as short-lived as the first, and yet another was formed, but cohesiveness and durability were not among their attributes, nor have we any records of these first fruits of medical union. But in 1871 a lasting association was finally established, its meetings have been regularly held, it has done much already to encourage better medical education and to raise the standard of the profession, and its records are being faithfully kept."

At a small conference early in 1871 it was "planned to get the little band of physicians together to talk over matters of interest to the profession," and a meeting was called for April 4th, 1871, at which Dr. Stedman said seven physicians were present. The following item appears in a current issue of the newspaper of about that date:

"The Denver Medical Association

The Denver Medical Association

"A meeting of the physicians of Denver was held at the office of Dr. Buckingham on the 4th instant. Dr. Buckingham was called to the chair, and Dr. W. H. Williams was appointed secretary. The object of the meeting having been explained by the chair, the following preamble and resolutions were offered and adopted:

"Whereas, It is to the interest of the profession and the community at large, that harmony and unity exist in the profession, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we proceed to the reorganization of the Denver Medical Association.

"Resolved, That at the meeting appointed for the permanent organization of the Denver Medical Society, all persons who consider themselves to be regular practitioners of medicine, and who do not practice medicine upon an exclusive dogma, are invited to take part in the organization of the said society; and that any objection being made to such person or persons taking part in said meeting must be sustained by a majority of those present.

"On motion, the chair appointed Drs. McClelland, Bibb and Heimberger as a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws for the government of the society; to which, on motion of Dr. Bancroft, the chair was added.

"Adjourned to meet at the office of Dr. McClelland on the 11th instant".

The meeting for permanent organization was held on the 11th of April, 1871, as appointed, Drs. Bancroft, Williams, Dickinson, Steele, Buckingham, Stedman, McClelland, Elsner, Heimberger, Gehrung and Bibb being present. Dr. Heimberger reported a draft of a Constitution and By-laws, which was adopted, and the Society, by it, was named The Denver Medical Association. The following officers were then elected: Dr. R. G. Buckingham, President; Dr. A. L. Justice, Vice-President; Dr. A. Stedman, Recording Secretary; Dr. W. H. Williams, Corresponding Secretary; Dr. E. C. Gehrung, Treasurer. A committee of censors, consisting of Drs. Justice, Heimberger and the President was appointed and the meeting adjourned to meet at Dr. McClelland's office on April 13th, at 8 p. m.

The following Preamble to the Constitution and By-laws was signed by all members: "We the undersigned practitioners of medicine — impressed with the sense of the great benefit which both the public and ourselves will derive from a legitimate — judicious, and enlightened practice of our Profession: — also of the ruin which the lawless and unscrupulous empiric must inevitably bring upon the community when intrusted with the guardianship of life and health — anxious to augment the usefulness of the profession — to preserve its honor untarnished and to sustain that high station in society to which the righteous discharge of our arduous and responsible duties entitle us, do hereby form ourselves into an association and pledge ourselves to be governed by the following Code and Rules of Order which we recognize as our Constitution and By-Laws."

Article II, Section I, of the Constitution reads as follows: "The object of this Association shall be the advancement and elevation of medical science, reciprocal improvement and the promotion of harmony and good feeling among its members."

The meeting of the 13th was held as appointed and the following named were reported as qualified under the Constitution and accepted as members, and consequently became the charter members of the Association: Drs. Richard G. Buckingham, Henry K. Steele, John Elsner, Arnold Stedman, Eugene C. Gehrung, George R. Bibb, William F. McClelland, Augustus L. Justice, Frederick J. Bancroft, D. E. Heimberger, J. Swinburne Dickinson, and William H. Williams. A fee-bill, reported by the committee on constitution and by-laws, was read and referred back. An abortive attempt to amend the constitution was made which gave an early precedent for the changes and attempted changes in our organic law which have been going on ever since. The meeting adjourned to meet at the same office on April 20th.

At the meeting of the 20th, held as agreed, a resolution to "regulate and harmonize the relations existing between druggists and physicians" was adopted. The fee-bill, a copy of which is attached to the minutes, was adopted and Dr. Elsner was elected a delegate to the American Medical Association, at the meeting to be held at San Francisco.

Dr. Elsner afterward declined the honor in favor of Dr. Buckingham, it being agreed that Dr. Elsner should go to the meeting at San Francisco as delegate from the Municipal Hospital, established by Dr. Elsner in 1870 on Ninth St., on the West Side, with twenty-nine beds.* On invitation the meeting then adjourned to the office of Drs. Elsner and Heimberger (which Dr. Elsner states was on the second floor in the same building on Larimer street, between 15th and 16th) to "discuss the good things there provided. After doing which the social as well as the professional meeting adjourned."

Movement to form a Territorial Medical Society

The minutes of the meeting held at Dr. McClelland's office on June 16, 1871, state that: "On motion of Dr. Williams, the Corresponding Sec'y was requested to notify the physicians residing in the Territory that a convention would be held in Denver on the 19th day of Sept. next, for the purpose of forming a territorial medical organization and invite their attendance upon the meeting of the same." At the meeting of July 13th, 200 printed copies of the letter of invitation were authorized, and the verbal report on the matter by the Corresponding Secretary at the meeting of July 25th was approved. At the meeting of August 8th a committeee was appointed to request Dr. Buckingham to deliver an address before the meeting of the territorial medical convention, and another committee was directed to make arrangements for the convention. At a meeting held on August 22nd, Dr. McClelland reported that he had made the request of Dr. Buckingham and that "the address would be forthcoming." On September 12th a special committee "to attend to the matter of a banquet for guests" was appointed "to attend to their duties and report at once, which was done, and Mr. Ford engaged to furnish said supper." On September 27th the bill for the supper was reported and ordered paid.

The Colorado Territorial Medical Society

The First Meeting

The first meeting

The printed "Report of the Meeting for the Organization of a Territorial Medical Society" states: "In response to a call issued by the Denver Medical Association, for a Territorial Medical Convention to be held in Denver, Colorado, on the 19th of September, 1871, representatives of the Medical Profession from different parts of the Territory of Colorado assembled at the District Court Room in Denver on Tuesday the 19th, at 11 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of organizing a Territorial Medical Society." The convention was called to order by Dr. W. F. McClelland, of Denver, Dr. G. S. McMurtrie, of Central, was made Temporary Chairman, and Dr. R. J. Collins, of Georgetown, was chosen Secretary pro tem.

Charter members

A resolution was adopted "That for the purpose of organization, all regular graduates of medicine, residents of this Territory, who acknowledge fealty to the Code of Ethics of the American Medical Association, and who are not objected to, may become members of this Association by signing their names to this resolution at the Secretary's table." The following physicians then signed their names: Drs. G. S. McMurtrie, Central City; A. L. Justice, Denver; R. G. Buckingham, Denver; F. J. Bancroft, Denver; I. J. Pollok, Georgetown; W. F. McClelland, Denver; John Elsner, Denver; E. C. Gehrung, Denver; J. S. Dickinson, Denver; S. D. Bowker, Central City; H. O. Dodge,* H. K. Steele, Denver; W. Edmundson, Central City; A. Stedman, Denver; W. H. Williams, Denver; and R. J. Collins,* Georgetown. The following names were added later in the meeting: Erasmus Garrott, Black Hawk; T. M. Smith, Laporte; S. C. Tolles, Central City; Eugene F. Holland, Idaho; Wm. H. Thacker, Denver; Joseph† Anderson, Golden; D. Heimberger, Denver; Charles F. Neilson, Denver, and Dr. P. R. Thombs, Pueblo, who, according to a statement in the transactions of the following year, was omitted from the list. Charter members, 25.

Dr. Buckingham delivered an appropriate address, closing with the following peroration: "Thanking you for your kind attention, let me urge upon you the immediate consideration of the important subject of organization, and may the time soon come when the Territorial Medical Association of Colorado will rest upon as firm a basis as the grand old mountains before us, that lift their snow-capped summits to the clouds." Drs. Steele, Pollok, Bowker, Edmundson, and Smith were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws. At the afternoon session the committee reported a constitution and by-laws, which, after the usual consideration, was adopted. Article I of the Constitution, and Section I of Article II declaring the objects of the Society and the qualifications for membership are as follows:

Article I.

Extracts from constitution and by-laws

"This Society shall be known as the Colorado Medical Society‡ and its objects shall be the improvement of its members in scientific and professional knowledge; the association of the profession for the purpose of mutual recognition and fellowship;

* Initials are given incorrectly in Report as H. C. Dodge, and A. J. Collins.

† In subsequent Transactions this name appears erroneously as James Anderson.

‡ In this title the word "Territorial" is evidently omitted through inadvertence, since this word appears on the title page of the official printed "Report of the Meeting for the Organization of a Territorial Medical Society", and the full title "Colorado Territorial Medical Society" is used on the title pages of all the early annual "Transactions" and in the Articles of Incorporation adopted at the Fifth Annual Session.

the promotion of the character, interests and honor of the fraternity by maintaining union and harmony, and by aiming to elevate the standard of medical education.

Article II.

"Section 1. Any regular graduate of Medicine and Surgery may become a member of this Society, who, by his adherence to the Code of Ethics of the American Medical Association, shows himself entitled to the confidence and fellowship of his medical brethren, and who by his general conduct and mode of life, proves himself worthy of being a member of one of the learned and liberal professions."

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Dr. R. G. Buckingham, President; Vice-Presidents, First, Dr. G. S. McMurtrie; Second, Dr. I. J. Pollok; Third, Dr. W. F. McClelland. Dr. A. Stedman was elected Secretary; Dr. R. J. Collins, Assistant Secretary; Dr. E. C. Gehrung, Treasurer, and Dr. H. O. Dodge, Librarian.

An evening session was held at which the names of candidates for membership were considered; the fee-bill of the Denver Medical Association was adopted; Dr. Justice was made chairman of a committee to publish the minutes; Drs. McClelland, Williams and Holland were elected delegates to the American Medical Association; an address was delivered by Dr. Steele; the Code of Ethics was discussed; and, probably paying proper attention to the "good things" provided by the Denver Medical Association, "The Society then adjourned to meet at Denver, in September or October, 1872, on a day to be specified by the President." *

Thus the "Colorado Territorial Medical Society" was organized with a total membership of twenty-five, and four of the charter members were still living at the time of the semi-centennial Session of the Society; Drs. William Edmundson, John Elsner,† and Eugene C. Gehrung, in Denver, and Dr. Horace O. Dodge in Pueblo, Colorado. The charter members built well, and they inaugurated a medical society that has ever continued to wax in strength and influence as the years have passed. It has grown with the state, and has amply fulfilled the functions intended by its organizers, as set forth in Article I of the original Constitution.

Letter from a charter member

In a recent letter to the writer, Dr. Horace O. Dodge, one of the surviving charter members, referring to this meeting says: "After several preliminary meetings, the Colorado Territorial Medical Society was organized on September 19th, 1871.

"The program of organization, previously agreed upon, was followed in the election of officers and the appointment of committees.

"All the meetings were characterized by harmony and good feeling. The number present represented a large majority of persons eligible to membership then living in the Territory. Every candidate for membership was required to submit his credentials to a committee who acted as a board of censors. The failure of several to do this caused some delay in perfecting the permanent organization.

"Only those who walked in the straight and narrow path prescribed by medical ethics were considered. The marked difference of the attitude of the profession then, and today, is that now effort is made to get all eligible persons into the fold, and by moral support keep them on ethical lines.

* For a full report of this Meeting, see the official published Transactions; also, L. E. Lemen, "The Medical Profession of Colorado," loc. cit., pp. 674.

† Dr. Elsner died April 1st, 1922, as this volume was about to go to press.

"When the organization was completed it was found that every member present was an officer or on some important committee. Thus all ambitions were, to an extent, satisfied.

"Never gifted at remembering names, there are a number of faces I recall but cannot name them. I do, however, recall Buckingham, Bancroft, McClelland, Justice, Thacker, Lemen, Elsner, Stedman, Williams, Anderson, McMurtrie, Edmundson, Gehrung, Collins, and Thombs who was elected but not present."

The Second Meeting

The second meeting of the Colorado Territorial Medical Society was held in the F Street First Presbyterian Church, Denver, September 24th, 1872. Routine business, the reading of scientific papers, and reports of cases, occupied the Society for two days. There were papers on persistent catarrh, practice of medicine, materia medica of Colorado; a report on obstetrics, on diseases peculiar to high altitudes and of cases of vesical calculus, encephaloid tumor, and fibroid of the uterus (removed by abdominal section, September 2nd, 1872). This rather ambitious program was well presented, as shown by the several papers, published in the Appendix of the printed Transactions. Dr. W. F. McClelland was elected President for the ensuing year; Dr. Arnold Stedman, Secretary; and Dr. Gehrung, Treasurer. Special committees were appointed to report on surgery, practice of medicine, obstetrics, and medical literature; and reports on climatology and epidemics, inflammatory rheumatism, materia medica of Colorado, ozone, skin and mucous membrane, phthisis pulmonalis, catarrh, surgical diseases of women, mineral springs of Colorado, and fevers, were assigned to certain members. The membership is given as twenty-seven.

The Third Meeting

The third annual meeting of the Society was held in the District Court Room, Denver, October 1st and 2nd, 1873. Routine business was transacted as customary. The President read an address, and reports on subjects assigned at the previous annual meeting on catarrh, surgery, ozone and materia medica were read. Dr. Gehrung, in his report on the surgical diseases of women, described and exhibited a pessary of his own invention for anterior displacement of the uterus. He also read papers on "Pelvic peritonitis and cellulitis" and "Does pregnancy cure malpositions of the womb?" Papers were read on double hare-lip, a case of simulated fissure of the anus, a case of supra-pubic cystotomy, "What class of consumptives ought to be sent to this country?" "Parallelism between the eye and the ear," and "Ascites in chronic Bright's disease treated by the constant galvanic current." Dr. G. S. McMurtrie, of Central City, was elected President; Dr. H. J. Pratt, Secretary; and Dr. E. C. Gehrung, Treasurer. Membership reported as forty-two.

The Fourth Meeting

The fourth annual meeting of the Society was held in Denver, June 24th and 25th, 1874. Morning and afternoon sessions were held each day, and routine business was transacted. The President presented an address, and reports of the committees on scientific subjects were received. Pathological specimens were presented, and the following voluntary papers were read: concerning the cause of gangrene following the ligation of the large arteries of the lower extremity; pneumatic aspiration; and removal of the superior maxillary division of the fifth pair of nerves for persistent facial neuralgia. Dr. Denison exhibited an instrument of his own invention for extension and adjustment in the treatment of fractures of the patella, and Dr. Bancroft read a paper on "Drainage in pulmonary consumption." The President announced the committees for the year and assigned to them a long list of scientific subjects to be reported upon at the next meeting. Dr. Henry K. Steele, of Denver, was elected President, and Dr. Arnold Stedman, Secretary. Membership, not stated.

The Fifth Meeting

The fifth annual meeting of the Society was held in Maennerchor Hall, Denver, on the 9th, 10th, and 11th of June, 1875. The President read an address, and after the usual business had been disposed of, the Society adopted Articles of Incorporation under the name of the Colorado Territorial Medical Society, creating seven Trustees to manage its business affairs. Voluntary contributions were presented on paraphimosis, operation for strangulated umbilical hernia, abdominal tumor, the extension windlass, consumption, bloodletting and rheumatism. Reports were made on medical literature, congenital cataract, climatology, gynecology, bromide of potassium, materia medica, the early symptoms and signs of phthisis pulmonalis, and removal of a fibroid tumor from the right hypogastrium, and pathological specimens were exhibited. Committees were appointed to report on medical ethics, surgery, practice of medicine, obstetrics, medical literature, climatology and epidemics, materia medica, inflammatory rheumatism, syphilis, pulmonary consumption, ophthalmology, climatic influence on the nervous system, gynecology, bronchitis and catarrh, public hygiene, diseases of the joints, and fractures and dislocations. Dr. Wm. H. Thacker, of Denver, was elected President; and Dr. Harrison A. Lemen, Secretary. Membership, fifty-six.

The Colorado State Medical Society
The Sixth Meeting

The sixth annual meeting of the Colorado Territorial Medical Society (soon to become a state institution)* was held in the Council Chamber, in Denver, June 20th, 21st and 22nd, 1876. Dr. Wm. H. Thacker having resigned because of failing health (which resulted in his death in 1876), the duties of the office devolved on the First Vice-President, Dr. Horace O. Dodge, of Boulder. Dr. Dodge presented an able address; the usual business was taken care of; and the Trustees, by virtue of the authority vested in them, submitted revised By-laws for the government of the Society, which were amended and adopted. Reports from the various committees on scientific topics, appointed at the last session, on pulmonary consumption, ozone, gynecology, and practice of medicine, were read. Contributions were presented on the winds of Colorado, neuralgia as a prevailing disease in this climate, incised wound with transfusion of blood, and the value of sneezing in the reduction of hernia, and a report of a case of renal calculus was made. Committees were appointed to report on a list of subjects, very similar to those of the previous year. Dr. William H. Williams, of Denver, was elected President, and Dr. Charles Denison, Secretary. Membership fifty-one, including two removals.

Statehood

These brief sketches of the first six meetings will suffice, perhaps, to indicate the general character of the work of the Society, and suggest, what may be clearly appreciated by a reading of the addresses, scientific papers and reports, that its membership was made up of earnest, ambitious and capable men, careful students, well versed in their profession and its literature.

*Colorado was admitted to the Union and became a state by proclamation of President U. S. Grant, dated August 1st, 1876.

From its inception the work of the Society has been published in full in its annual edition of the Transactions, or, after 1903, in its official journal, Colorado Medicine, and complete files of both publications have been preserved.
